Council to use multi-storey room for patrolling officers

"It will make use of a building that's under used." The neighbourhood team, which used Brooklands College as a drop-in for three years until January, is currently using facilities at the Ashford Centre.

A spokesman for Surrey Police said discussions are ongoing to identify an area in the car park for its officers to take breaks during regular patrols.

"It is important to stress that discussions are on-going and no agreement has been reached at this stage," he said.

"The proposed facility would not be a public office or policing post and, as it would be a local arrangement, would not incur any costs."

Owners fined for planning rules

Council officials have since returned to the site and have confirmed that the northern part of Bellbourne Nurseries is now clear of all vehicles, complying with notices.

That's a streak of a mask you've got there. Two Rivers operations manager Steve Barlow will be appearing as Shrek in the Staines Christmas Parade to raise money for The Max Appeal.

Taking it to the Max to raise vital funds for a worthy cause

STAINES' Christmas Parade will be raising money for a charity which supports people with Digorge syndrome, and their families.

Run by volunteers, The Max Appeal supports people with the missing gene 22q11.2 and helps them to live an independent life.

It is thought the condition affects 1 in 1,800 babies and can result in severe congenital problems, such as complex heart defects. The extent to which a child is affected is extremely variable and almost impossible to predict.

There are approximately 180 anomalies caused by the deletion and each individual could be affected by many. A lucky few may have no discernible problems at all.

Two Rivers Shopping Centre Operations Manager Steve Barlow, whose grandson Theo is diagnosed with Digorge syndrome, will be taking part in the parade dressed as Shrek.

He also ran the London Marathon with his daughter in April for the charity.

"This condition can affect the vital organs of the body and when Theo was only days old he was undergoing open heart surgery to replace a valve in his heart," he said.

"He still has various other physical challenges to overcome which he rises to with a smile on his face.

"The help, support and information provided by Max Appeal has proved invaluable in Theo's continued development."

The Magical Movie Memories Christmas Parade take place on Sunday November 23, when the Two Rivers Shopping Centre is hopping to raise £2,000 through collection buckets, also being donated to the charity.
